CLEANSING: AN ESSENTIAL STEP

Good cleansing is the first golden rule for skin beauty: removing make-up, pollution dust, excess sebum and hyper-keratinized cells that limit cell oxygenation, are key steps for a healthy and radiant complexion, and for a well-hydrated skin.

Ideal cleansing needs to be effective but also must not alter the hydrolipidic barrier, the skin's natural defense against environmental aggressions. A too harsh removal can leave a "tight skin" sensation, redness and itching, symptoms of dehydration; it can also be responsible for the sebaceous glands' so called "rebound" effect, which, in order to rebuild the protective barrier removed by the cleanser, produce sebum in excessive quantity, turning the skin oily and shiny. It therefore becomes important to select gentle cleansing formulas, rich in active ingredients that enhance the normal skin defenses, and the most suitable cleanser for one's skin condition and climate.

HOW DO CLEANSERS WORK?

There are two mechanisms that promote a cleansing action: the first and most common one takes advantage of the use of surfactants, the second and gentler one takes advantage of the lipidic affinity of the skin.

SURFACTANTS

Surfactants are molecules that remove impurities of different origins thanks to their ability to get wet, emulsify and produce foam. They can bind both with water and with the oily phase, forming "micelles" that remove hydrophilic substances, like sweat and pollution dust, and lipophylic ones, like sebum and make-up. Since surfactants are highly effective cleansers, they sometimes risk being aggressive: removing part of the hydrolipidic film, they dry the skin out. SLES (SODIUM LAURETH SULFATE) and SLS (SODIUM LAURYL SULFATE) are very common surfactants, but they are aggressive and cause irritation especially on face skin. Alternative surfactants belonging to the family of ISETHIONATES (cocoyl - lauroyl methyl-, Cocoamphodiacetate or LAURYL GLUTAMATE) are gentler and are thus preferred in [comfort zone] formulas because they can be combined to achieve high effectiveness and tolerability.

In addition to this, the family of POLYGLYCEROLS stands out for the creation of tiny micelles that act as highly tolerable magnets, which makes them ideal for eye make-up removers and delicate skins.

LIPIDIC AFFINITY

The second mechanism takes advantage of the lipidic affinity of the skin: lipophylic substances bind with molecules that have a similar structure (e.g.: oil with oil), and, when associated to the mechanical action of water, favour their removal. It is a very gentle cleansing that is particularly recommended for sensitive skin prone to dehydration.

In both types, to make cleansing effective, but even gentler, it is important to enrich formulas with an oily phase and with moisturizing active ingredients to preserve the hydrolipidic film and keep skin elasticity and softness.

ESSENTIAL

FOCUS ON CELLULAR OSMOSIS

Osmosis is the physiological process with which every cell protects its hydration level, countering all the internal and external causes of its alteration. It is a mechanism that leads to the distribution of liquids inside and outside the cell via a semipermeable membrane, the cell membrane. In a condition of balance, called ISOTONIC, the concentration of liquids inside and outside the cell is balanced. OSMOLYTES are the physiological guardians of this optimum state that, even in stressful conditions caused by extreme temperatures, pollution and sun exposure, activate to maintain a balanced in and out flow in the cell, thus preserving hydration and cell vitality. Differently, following extended stress, the protection of natural osmolytes is no longer sufficient, the concentration of liquids inside and outside the cell is unbalanced and this can damage cell health and lead to its dehydration. In particular, a HYPERTONIC condition occurs when the concentration of liquids inside the cell is higher than outside: this causes a swelling of the cell that can even lead to its explosion. A HYPOTONIC condition is instead when the concentration of liquids inside the cell is lower, thus originating a shrinkage of the cell that limits its functionality.

ESSENTIAL: THE FIRST STEP FOR A RADIANT AND HYDRATED SKIN

[comfort zone] relaunches ESSENTIAL, a line of daily products indispensable for cleansing, exfoliating, removing make-up and defending the natural beauty of the skin. Gentle formulas without silicones or aggressive surfactants, enriched by active ingredients promoting the osmotic balance, favour a simple and effective beauty routine for all skin types, while totally respecting the skin's physiology.

ACTIVE INGREDIENTS

BETAINE, a natural osmolyte extracted from sugar beets, is present in all the line's products, to maintain the skin's natural hydrolipidic film, and support it against external environmental aggressions.

NIACINAMIDE or VITAMIN PP re-activates the cutaneous microcirculation and optimizes oxygenation to the tissues. It also contributes to maintaining moisturization and keeps the skin in optimal living state.

BROMELAIN, SILICA and JOJOBA SPHERES are the components of the two exfoliant formulas designed to satisfy different skin needs. Bromelain, extracted from pineapple, with its enzymatic action, promotes a gradual degradation of the most superficial dead cells (keratinocytes) to purify and polish more fragile skins. Particles in different dimensions and characteristics, such as silica and jojoba spheres, create instead a two-dimensional mechanical scrub designed for more resistant skins.

HOME CARE

The home care range includes different products to satisfy the various daily routines, preferences and skin requirements: a cleansing milk for all skin conditions and climates, a new face wash, i.e. a foamy cream particularly recommended for young, less dehydrated skin. Finally, a multifunctional product is micellar water that, in one single step, removes face, eye and lip make-up.

A softening toner for all skin conditions completes cleansing and rebalances the skin, revealing its natural vitality.

Two intensive products complete the range for a deep exfoliating action: an enzymatic peeling and a mechanical scrub, to satisfy the needs of different skin conditions.

ESSENTIAL

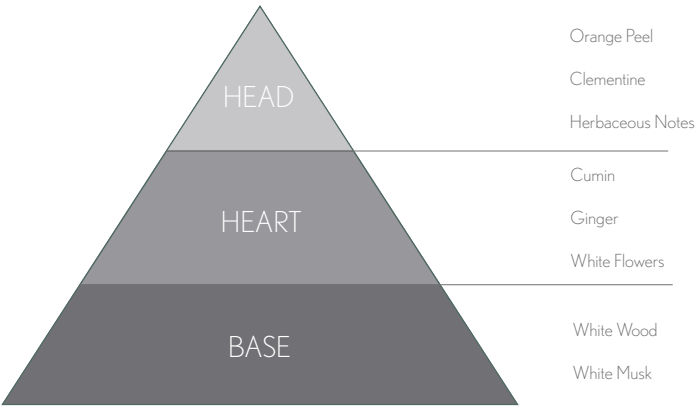

PROFESSIONAL

The professional range offers aestheticians the possibility of choosing the best product combination for the first essential step in all face treatments: skin preparation. Consisting of a cleansing milk, micellar water, toner and two exfoliating products, enzymatic and mechanical, ESSENTIAL meets the needs of all clients.

FRAGRANCE

We always select fragrances that are evocative of the action of the product and use them at minimum concentrations to make our formulas exquisite and safe on the skin.

Fresh and vibrant with hints of citrus from orange peel and ginger, the fragrance evokes the lightness and vitality of cleansing gestures, enhancing the line's modern appeal, ideal for female and male users.
